Roosevelt Park's New Bike Trail

Marty volunteers to speak at an awards ceremony honoring her friend Christy. In her speech, Marty explains why Christy won an award for her civic leadership in developing the park's new bike trail.

Before she begins to write, Marty makes this list. Use it to answer question 1.

The History of the New Bike Path

1. Met with other trail riders
2. Wrote a petition
3. Found support
4. Planned the trail
5. Convinced city council

1 Based on Marty’s list, which organizational pattern is best for her to use?

- A Chronological order
- B Cause-and-effect order
- C Thematic order
- D Comparison/contrast order

Here is the first part of Marty’s draft. Use it to answer questions 2-5.

(1)My friend Christy is a great example of how one person with determination can make her vision a reality. (2)Christy loves to ride bikes. (3)She does not just ride along city streets, though. (4)She is passionate about tough trail rides. (5)Because Christy had to travel outside the city to locate formidable bike trails, she decided to do something.

(6)Christy knew that Roosevelt Park had a creek. (7)Twelve miles of land around the creek were seldom used. (8)Christy decided to get together with other trail riders to ask the city council to approve a bike path along the unused land.

(9)Christy developed a petition for people who wanted to create the trail. (10)She and other riders asked all of their biking friends if they would sign the list. (11)They gathered three hundred signatures. (12)Christy and a few other riders went before the city council with their petition. (13)Surprisingly, residents of all ages also showed up to support the new bike trail. (14)The city council evaluated the request and, more importantly, agreed to allow the bike trail.

(15)The trail riders joined with several local bike shops, a local construction company, and the city’s Parks and Recreation Department was joined by the trail riders. (16)The project, like, needed teamwork, you know, and some getting-it-together. (17)These groups began planning and then building the trail. (18)The bike path was evolving from an idea into a community asset.

2 When Marty rereads her draft, she realizes that sentence 6 lacks elaboration. Which of the following is the best way for her to revise it?

- F Christy knew that Roosevelt Park had some water somewhere in it.
- G Christy knew that Roosevelt Park had a clean, lively creek running through it.
- H Christy knew that Roosevelt Park had fresh water.
- J Christy knew that Roosevelt Park had a creek in it.

3 How can Marty best combine sentences 10 and 11 without changing their meaning?

- A She and other riders' signatures asked all of their friends if they would sign the list, and so they gathered three hundred bikers.
- B She and other riders asked all of their biking friends if they would sign the list, gathering three hundred signatures.
- C She gathered three hundred signatures, so she asked all of their biking friends, other riders, if they would sign the list.
- D She asked all of their biking friends if they would sign the list, so other riders gathered three hundred signatures.

4 Marty rereads her draft and notices which of the following does not match the tone of her paper?

- F Sentence 4
- G Sentence 8
- H Sentence 16
- J Sentence 18

5 When Marty reviews her draft, she realizes that sentence 15 is confusing: The trail riders joined with several local bike shops, a local construction company, and the city's Parks and Recreation Department was joined by the trail riders. Which of the following is the best revision?

- A The trail riders joined with several local bike shops, a local construction company, and the city's Parks and Recreation Department.
- B The trail riders joined with several local bike shops, and by a local construction company, and the city's Parks and Recreation Department.
- C The trail riders joined with several local bike shops, and a local construction company and the city's Parks and Recreation Department joined the trail riders.
- D The trail riders joined with several local bike shops, a local construction company was there, and the city's Parks and Recreation Department.

Go to the next
working.

Read the next section of Marty’s draft and use it to answer questions 6–9. This section has groups of underlined words. The questions ask about these groups of underlined words.

(19)The preliminary step was deciding exactly where the trail should be. (20)All of the riders worked together to design a trail that was not only challenging but also accessible to beginning riders with lesser skill.

(21)The trail was planned, the construction company donated a small bulldozer for demolition. (22)The bulldozer cleared a path, dredging out a few places where the trail crossed the creek. (23)The riders knew that water crossings would make an exciting trail. (24)Once the bulldozer had done the work: many volunteers donated several weekends to prepare the trail for riders. (25)They smoothed the trail and removed obstacles that the bulldozer had left behind. (26)They placed signs and markers along the trail to make sure bikers knew the route. (27)The construction took two months of work, but now Roosevelt Park has a rewarding bike trail.

(28)I have been on the Roosevelt Park bike path many times. (29)It has many ups and downs, bumps and jumps; it is a great ride. (30)This trail is becomming one of the community’s important exercise spots. (31)I can’t keep up with Christy when we ride together, but I am glad that she decided to work hard to initiate the creation of the Roosevelt Park bike path. (32)Christy deserves this award because she acted on her dream, causing a community to come together.

The Class Election

Carol’s English teacher asks each student in the class to write a short narrative on a school-related topic.

- 20 When writing her story, Carol will most likely be concerned with all of these EXCEPT —
- F making sure her story has an organizational pattern
  - G listing the names of all the students she interviewed
  - H using descriptive details to make the story clear
  - J providing meaningful elaboration

Carol makes this story map. Use it to answer question 21.

TITLE:

The Class Election

CONFLICT:

How do you choose between being a loyal friend and staying true to yourself?

SETTING:

A present-day high school

CHARACTERS:

Max, the narrator of the story
Tony Donato, his popular friend
Lorna Sadler, Tony's opponent in the election for class president

EVENTS:

1. When Max's friend Tony decides to run for class president, Max agrees to be his campaign manager.
2. Max realizes that Tony doesn't really care about being president and that Tony's opponent would make a better president.
3. Max is torn between sticking with Tony and supporting Tony's opponent.
4. Max decides to be true to himself, no matter what other people think of his decision.

21 Carol's story map will help her do all of the following EXCEPT —

- A remember the order in which things happened
- B include important details
- C correct her grammatical errors
- D organize her narrative

Here are two drafts of the first part of Carol’s story. Use them to answer questions 22-25.

DRAFT A

My friend Tony Donato asked me to be his campaign manager in his bid for junior class president. I quickly agreed. I thought it would be very easy to get Tony elected, especially when I found out that his competition was Lorna Sadler, a quiet girl who was in the French Club and on the math team. It wouldn’t be hard to beat her.

To my surprise, one day after school Lorna approached me. She said she knew I was Tony’s campaign manager, but she asked me to work on her campaign instead. She calmly explained why she thought she would make a better class president than Tony. When I told her that I wouldn’t desert Tony, she smiled as if she had expected me to say that. She said I had to be true to myself. Then she told me to let her know if I changed my mind. I was shocked at her nerve, but at the same time, I had to respect her self-confidence. This girl was no pushover after all.

Warning Tony that he needed to prepare really well for the approaching debate with Lorna, he wouldn’t listen to me. He just laughed. For the first time, I felt a prickle of doubt about him. He was a great buddy, but would he make a decent class president?

DRAFT B

"I think I'll run for class president," my friend Tony Donato announced. "Want to be my campaign manager, Max?"

"Sure!" I said.

Tony was handsome and popular. Getting him elected would be a snap. With just a minimum of campaigning, the presidency could be his.

"Do you know who your competition is?" I asked.

"I heard Lorna Sadler is running," Tony said. "I won't have any trouble beating her." Lorna was a quiet girl who was in the French Club and on the math team. Neither of us knew her very well.

To my surprise, one day after school Lorna approached me. She said, "I know you're Tony's campaign manager, but you should come to work for me instead. Tony's a great guy, but he won't make a good class president. I will. I've been the president of the French Club for two years now, and under my leadership, both enrollment and income have increased." She went on talking, but my mind was reeling too much. For me to pay attention. Finally, I interrupted her.

"There's no way I'll work on your campaign. Tony is my friend; I won't leave him in the lurch," I said.

She smiled. "Well, of course, you have to be true to yourself. Let me know if you should change your mind."

I couldn't wait to find Tony and tell him that Lorna wouldn't be as easy to beat as we first thought. If he didn't start working on what he was going to say, Lorna might succeed in making him look silly in front of the whole school. When I told him my concerns, he just laughed.

22 How can Carol best combine the following two sentences from Draft A?

My friend Tony Donato asked me to be his campaign manager in his bid for junior class president. I quickly agreed.

- F When my friend Tony Donato asked me to be his campaign manager in his bid for junior class president, I quickly agreed.
- G My friend Tony Donato, in his bid for junior class president, asked me to be his campaign manager when I quickly agreed.
- H In his bid for junior class president, my friend Tony Donato quickly agreed and asked me to be his campaign manager.
- J Quickly agreeing in his bid for junior class president was my friend Tony Donato, and he asked me to be his campaign manager.

23 How can Carol best revise this sentence from paragraph 3 of Draft A?

Warning Tony that he needed to prepare really well for the approaching debate with Lorna, he wouldn't listen to me.

- A Warning Tony that he needed to prepare really well for the approaching debate with Lorna is what I was doing but he wouldn't listen to me.
- B He needed to prepare really well for the approaching debate with Lorna, he wouldn't listen to me when I warned him.
- C Tony, he needed to prepare really well for the approaching debate with Lorna, he wouldn't listen to me, I warned him.
- D I warned Tony that he needed to prepare really well for the approaching debate with Lorna, but he wouldn't listen to me.

24 In paragraph 3 of Draft B, how can Carol rewrite the phrase a minimum of campaigning so that it contains the most specific language?

- F a few campaign posters and some free candy
- G the old tried and true political methods
- H a couple of ideas that had occurred to me
- J several clever tricks I had up my sleeve

25 After Carol reviews Draft B, she notices that one sentence is incomplete. Which of the following does she need to revise to make it a complete sentence?

- A Tony was handsome and popular.
- B Getting him elected would be a snap.
- C For me to pay attention.
- D Finally, I interrupted her.

Read the next part of Carol’s rough draft and use it to answer questions 26–30. This section has groups of underlined words. The questions ask about these groups of underlined words.

The debate went as bad as I had feared it would. Lorna seemed as confident and prepared as the professional politicians who appeared on the Sunday morning talk shows. She gave an inspiring description of her goals for our school. In contrast, Tony’s biggest contribution to the debate was to say that the lunch lady, Mrs. Stewart, needed to serve pizza more often.

When it was finally over I rushed up to him. “We have to fix this. Maybe you can write an article for the school paper that outlines your positions—”

“Calm down, Max,” Tony said. “I’m not writing any article, especially for a dorky school newspaper like ours.” He winked at some supporters. They laughed on cue, as he had expected.

“Don’t you want to win the election?” I asked.

Tony frowned and said, “I thought that was your job, man.”

It was the last straw, but I didn’t know what to do. I had agreed to work on Tony’s campaign. I didn’t like to think of myself as a deserter. Should I support him no matter what? But how could I, when it was obvious that Lorna would make a better president? Suddenly, something she had said came back to me: be true to yourself.

The next day, Lorna and I ran into each other. She said, I heard you resigned from Tony’s campaign. Are you ready to work on mine?”

I shook my head. “Even though I’m not Tony’s campaign manager anymore, he’s still a friend. I can’t help his competition. Other people might not agree with my decision, but I have to be true to myself.”

“I understand,” Lorna said, “but if I’m elected, I’m going to need many people to chair committees. I hope you’ll at least consider joining my team.”

“I will,” I said, and I meant it.
