

Teaching with Love and Logic by Jim Fay and David Funk addresses classroom management techniques that engage students in learning and prevent the loss of instructional time due to discipline concerns. It supports Dominion High School's belief that students respond to teachers when teachers take the time to build positive relationships with them and when they recognize that teachers care about them. This school has guided practices at Dominion High School and the entire staff engaged in book talks during the 2015-2016 school year.

The Fundamental 5 by Sean Cain and Mike Laird lays out five instructional practices that are central to the instructional culture at Dominion High School. Teachers receive training and a copy of the book when they join our staff. Our Instructional walkthrough specifically asks observers to comment on the use of these techniques.

Why Don't Students Like School? by Daniel Willingham is this school year's book study. Staff was asked to read this book over the summer and book talks have been conducted throughout the year to address different chapters and their implication in the classroom.
