

WELCOME
to HIGH SCHOOL!

How is High School Similar to Middle School?

Homeroom and/or advisory:

- Homeroom/advisory frequency varies from school to school

Block scheduling continues, but you get to sleep a little later!

- Slight variations in bell schedules

Certain required classes each year:

- Service level options are IEP team determinations
- Diploma requirements vary

How is High School Different from Middle School?

Earn credits toward a diploma;

No “Houses” as in middle school;

More elective options & greater mix of grade-levels;

Huge variety of clubs/organizations/sports opportunities:

- Virginia High School League (VHSL) requirements for competitive events: athletics, forensics, debate, publications, theater;
- LCPS deadlines and requirements.

Lockers - many students don't use them.

How do Special Education Services and Support look in High School?

The Special Education Continuum of Services

Special Education Continuum

Special Education-Only settings may include:

Basic Skills;
Electives;
Academic Classes; Functional
Academic Classes; Adaptive PE.

The IEP team determines the Least Restrictive Setting for the student.

The IEP team meeting that determines the goals, accommodations, supports and services for 9th grade occurs in 8th grade year.

Parents, students, and typically a representative from the receiving high school are part of that team.

There are Three Diploma Options for Students Entering High School 2018-2019 and beyond:

Applied Studies

Standard

Advanced Studies

If you would like more information we encourage you to attend a PRS
