Fourteen year-old Savannah Schafer lives in a rural community in the state of West Virginia. A rural area is different from a city because there are fewer people, and settlements are smaller. Her home is deep in a valley surrounded by mountains that are rocky and covered in trees. While many farms are located in rural areas because they require large plots of land to grow food or house livestock, in Savannah’s community the mountains and rocky soil make it difficult to farm. This is one reason why few people live in her area.

What’s it like to live in the mountains? “Because we have a lot of space we get to have horses and chickens,” she says. Savannah’s family harvests eggs from the chickens for breakfast. “We also lose electricity a lot,” she says, “because the trees fall on power lines whenever there’s a storm.”

Many people in America are unfamiliar with life without electricity, but in Savannah’s community people keep battery-powered flashlights and oil lamps stored in case the lights go out. Some people also use a generator—a machine that generates electricity from gasoline—whenever there are emergencies. Savannah’s family uses a wood stove during winter storms for cooking and warmth. In the winter, milk and other refrigerated items can be kept outside, but in the summer food often spoils. “I don’t like when I have to clean out the refrigerator after we lose electricity, so mom usually does it.”
Savannah’s home also uses a well dug deep into the ground for water. Electricity is used to pump the water out of the well and into the pipes of the house. When you turn on the faucet to do the dishes or take a shower, the water flows out just like it does in a city building. In cities, every building is hooked up to a water supply that runs in pipes underground, but in rural areas people live too far apart to use pipes.

According to Hope Yen, in 2011 only 16% of the population in the United States lived in a rural area. However, over 90% of the land in the United States is considered rural. While most Americans live in cities, most of America is still considered rural.

Going to school in a rural area means having fewer classmates and travelling longer distances. To get to her high school Savannah must drive forty miles to the nearest city. This means Savannah must get up much earlier than her city classmates in order to be on time. The roads in her community aren’t paved with asphalt either, so during storms they can become too muddy or snowy to pass. In cities a snowplow comes by quickly, but areas where fewer people live aren’t the priority, so days can pass before a snowplow clears the road. Sometimes Savannah must miss school because storms make it impossible to drive.

Savannah isn’t sure yet if she wants to live in the country or the city when she grows up. “I like being in nature, hearing the creek and the birds, and having a big yard. I also like being in the city, though, where I can go bowling or skating, or see my friends. It can get lonely in the country, although I do love being around our animals.”
1. Where does Savannah Schafer live?

A in a city forty miles away from a mountain community
B in a house hooked up to a water supply
C in a place where it is easy to see her friends
D in a rural community of West Virginia

2. What does this passage compare living in the country with?

A This passage compares living in the country with living in the city.
B This passage compares living in the country with living in the mountains.
C This passage compares living in the country with living in a rural community.
D This passage compares living in the country with farming on rocky soil.

3. Living in the country is different from living in the city.

What evidence from the passage supports this statement?

A According to Hope Yen, over 90% of the land in the United States is considered rural.
B Savannah likes being in nature, hearing the creek and the birds, and having a big yard.
C While many farms are located in rural areas because they require large plots of land to grow food, it is difficult to farm in Savannah’s community.
D Snow is cleared quickly from city roads, while days can pass before a snowplow clears roads in the country.

4. Why is Savannah not sure whether she wants to live in the country or the city when she grows up?

A The roads in her community are not paved with asphalt.
B She likes different things about both places.
C Her family harvests eggs from their chickens for breakfast.
D Her family uses a wood stove during winter storms.

5. What is this passage mostly about?

A what a generator is and why some people use one whenever there are emergencies
B what living in the country is like for a girl in a mountain valley of West Virginia
C the differences between water that comes from a well and water that comes from underground pipes
D the 84% of Americans who do not live in a rural area
6. Read the following sentence: “A rural area is different from a city because there are fewer people, and settlements are smaller.”

What does the word rural mean?

A  in the country
B  in the city
C  in the ocean
D  in a building

7. Choose the answer that best completes the sentence below.

Savannah likes some things about being in the country; ________, she also likes some things about being in the city.

A  as a result
B  on the other hand
C  most importantly
D  as an illustration

8. What is one thing Savannah likes about the country?

______________________________________________________________________
______________________________________________________________________
______________________________________________________________________
______________________________________________________________________
9. What is one thing Savannah likes about the city?

______________________________________________________________________
______________________________________________________________________
______________________________________________________________________
______________________________________________________________________

10. Would living in the country or the city be a better choice for Savannah when she grows up? Explain your answer with evidence from the passage.

______________________________________________________________________
______________________________________________________________________
______________________________________________________________________
______________________________________________________________________
______________________________________________________________________
1. Where does Savannah Schafer live?
   A in a city forty miles away from a mountain community
   B in a house hooked up to a water supply
   C in a place where it is easy to see her friends
   D in a rural community of West Virginia

2. What does this passage compare living in the country with?
   A This passage compares living in the country with living in the city.
   B This passage compares living in the country with living in the mountains.
   C This passage compares living in the country with living in a rural community.
   D This passage compares living in the country with farming on rocky soil.

3. Living in the country is different from living in the city.
   What evidence from the passage supports this statement?
   A According to Hope Yen, over 90% of the land in the United States is considered rural.
   B Savannah likes being in nature, hearing the creek and the birds, and having a big yard.
   C While many farms are located in rural areas because they require large plots of land to grow food, it is difficult to farm in Savannah’s community.
   D Snow is cleared quickly from city roads, while days can pass before a snowplow clears roads in the country.

4. Why is Savannah not sure whether she wants to live in the country or the city when she grows up?
   A The roads in her community are not paved with asphalt.
   B She likes different things about both places.
   C Her family harvests eggs from their chickens for breakfast.
   D Her family uses a wood stove during winter storms.

5. What is this passage mostly about?
   A what a generator is and why some people use one whenever there are emergencies
   B what living in the country is like for a girl in a mountain valley of West Virginia
   C the differences between water that comes from a well and water that comes from underground pipes
   D the 84% of Americans who do not live in a rural area
6. Read the following sentence: “A rural area is different from a city because there are fewer people, and settlements are smaller.”

What does the word rural mean?

A. in the country
B. in the city
C. in the ocean
D. in a building

7. Choose the answer that best completes the sentence below.

Savannah likes some things about being in the country; ________, she also likes some things about being in the city.

A. as a result
B. on the other hand
C. most importantly
D. as an illustration

8. What is one thing Savannah likes about the country?

Suggested answer: Students may name such points of appeal as being in nature, having a big yard, and hearing the creek and the birds. (All answers must come from the passage.)

9. What is one thing Savannah likes about the city?

Suggested answer: Students may name such points of appeal as seeing her friends and going bowling or skating. (All answers must come from the passage.)

10. Would living in the country or the city be a better choice for Savannah when she grows up? Explain your answer with evidence from the passage.

Suggested answer: Answers may vary, as long as they are supported by the passage. Students may argue that living in the country would be a better choice because of Savannah’s love for nature. Conversely, they may argue that living in the country creates problems for Savannah—she has to drive far to see her friends, and mud or snow can make the roads in her community impossible to drive on. Therefore, living in the city, where she does not have to deal with such problems—and can see her friends and go bowling or skating—would be a better choice for her.